FROM THE DESK OF THE FAWNDER

where pigs fly

Dearest Reader,

Welcome to the newest issue of The Daily Doe, we're so thankful you're here. This is a truly thrilling time for Doe Creative. We have a lot to show you, hopefully soon. Bringing The Daily Doe to life was the first step of taking Doe further towards all we envision it to be. A vehicle for artists to pursue sustainable careers in their craft. Since the first issue in 2020, we have been honored to bring you some really incredible work on a recurring seasonal basis. We want to continue doing that, and build on the foundationn we've laid.

Now that The Daily Doe has its legs, we look to what the next evolution can be for this publication. What would you like to see in this newspaper in the future? Or where? We're listening at hello@doecreative.co, or on Instagram @doecreativeco.

Talk soon,

Lauren Garvin

Tori Phillips Photo

Tori Phillips Photography, a photographer chasing more than just getting the right shot. I believe that photography should make you feel something and that is forever the goal. I'm a believer in the magic in the mundane, the extraordinary and everything in between. Capturing those bits of magic is as good as it gets. I get a rush out of pushing the boundaries a bit and creating "a little risk is where the Magic is found."

A little risk is where the magic is found.
I'm your hype girl behind the camera in the most authentic way and while I thrive in directing poses, I want to push that boundary a bit and discover the twist that only you can bring. Let those poses fall, keep moving and let's get weird with it. Those bits in time cannot be recreated which makes it truly art.

One of our personal favorite Orlando treasures, Deli Desires is truly something special to behold.

Starting as a delivery pop-up during early COVID quarantine, the “lockdown blues” as beautifully described by Deli Desires’ own Elise, the Deli team came together after many being let go in those initial pandemic cutbacks to bring Jewish cuisine to the doors of Orlando. The group had discussed starting a brick and mortar cocktail bar and restaurant, but quickly were able to brainstorm a way to shift their efforts over beer-powered lockdown meetings. All coming from hospitality and food service backgrounds, they wanted to celebrate the bonding over shared food with staples that could live in the pantry and fridge over multiple meals.

After several months of building Deli Desires as an Instagram delivery concept, the opportunity for a brick and mortar location came to be in perfect timing. A true effort alongside the Orlando community, thanks to many like Tim Brown of Lazy Moon opening the ovens for the Deli Desires bialys to become possible, to giving encouragement and tips in the right direction. Taking inspiration from deli counters and bodegas for the look and feel, exploring the flavors of the modern Jewish deli for building what you now see on the menu, as well as working with their graphic designer, Stephen Fessey, to visualize the masterpiece of Deli Desires’ branding, the phase of taking Deli Desires to a physical takeaway restaurant is a true creative collaboration.

Tyson Bodiford, Hannah Jaffe, Nathan Sloan, Elise Ciungan, and Cory Bennett each bring significant creative vision and pillar skills individually to give Deli Desires immense power and unique innovation you can see in every detail. Chef team Hannah and Nate bring the bakes and food creations to life with love and care down to the last ingredient. Tyson is not only the mastermind behind the natural wine selection at the deli, and their social media extraordinaire! Cory is the creator of the Deli Desires beverage program, including phenomenal sodas invented, canned, and labeled all in house. Elise is responsible for the breathtaking interior design at the shop, inspired by classic deli culture. She also runs the coffee program at Deli working with beloved St. Pete roasters Bandit Coffee. Each of these powerhouses that make up the ownership of Deli Desires bring so much to the artistry of their work and are real deal community legends.

What’s next for Deli Desires? They plan to continue to serve the local Orlando community well, keeping us fed and inspired with pop-ups, collab menus, coffee program expansion, community outreach, catering and beyond. Deli Desires is also one of our gracious hosts! You can find The Daily Doe on the counter inside while you wait for your bialys.

Driven by inspiration and a love for celebrating, Gold Glo Weekend is a full-service collective made up of Shelby Sloan (Gold Dust Home), Hannah Gomez (Hannah Glo Photo), and Tammy Dehler (EOW Designs). With our powers combined, we offer the Central Florida community an all-in-one approach to party planning. Complete with creative direction, planning, floral design, and photography, we're not your average party people! Through an artful approach, we seek to provide our clients with events

Hal and Fran came to Gold Glo Weekend seeking a unique and fun wedding that reflected who they are as a couple. After beginning the planning process on their own, they realized how challenging it was to find vendors who understood their ideas for what they described as a “not lame wedding.” Thanks to a friend, they were referred to our creative director and planner, Shelby Sloan of Gold Dust Home. Shelby immediately understood their desire for a celebration that was not like the rest and began laying the groundwork for the colorful, creative, and funky wedding of their dreams. Working alongside Hal and Fran, Shelby elevated their original ideas and helped to create a one-of-a-kind party. She brought on our florist, Tammy Dehler of EOW Designs, to bring their vision to life through deeply artistic and thoughtful floral design. With deep ties to Orlando, it only made sense to host the events at hyperlocal spots. The ceremony was held at Langford Park, a seemingly underrated and quite affordable place to say “I do!” (Pro tip: most city and county parks are going to be much more cost effective than a traditional wedding venue.) The couple have spent much time at Stardust Coffee and Video and it seemed like a no-brainer to bring the party to a place they’ve held dear for so many years. The cocktail and reception were made complete with a stunning grazing station by The Graze Room and dinner by well-known food trucks, Tamale Co. and Hot Asian Buns. Hannah Gomez, of Hannah Glo Photo, was there to capture the big and small moments in between with her documentary style approach to wedding photography. Overall, this wedding was one for the books and the Gold Glo Weekend trifecta delivered on Hal and Fran’s wish for a wedding celebration that felt uniquely theirs.

Jamie Griffin is an Orlando native working as a photographer + ceramicist. After working many years in the photo industry, in 2021 she started Your Goodlight as a way to work with small businesses; to provide them with creative content that not only tells the story of their brand but elevates it as well. She has been a lover of the light from a young age, always noticing the way it falls gently into a room, how it illuminates the smile of a loved one or the way it can make everyday moments a still life painting. It's the mundane things that make up most of our moments and capturing the beauty in that, through lifestyle photography, for clients and herself is what she's all about.

What started as a meditative hobby only a year ago quickly showed itself to be more than just that and

It's Wonky was born. It's Wonky is a ceramic endeavor that focuses on making pieces character-filled pieces that can become the perfectly-imperfect addition to your everyday routines. She started by taking a spring beginners class at Crealde, then soon realized that she hadn't loved a craft so deeply since photography and decided to run with that feeling. Having an outlet that allows her to let go, slow down, get messy and play has reminded her how crucial those things are to being human.
